

The FISTS proposal makes sense to me. Just because the rest of the world is going "NO CODE" does not mean the US amateur community has to lower its standards. Learning the code is a right of passage to your ham ticket and something that has to be earned through a little work and study. This in itself makes you feel proud to have become a amateur opp and of more value to the individual who worked hard earn it.